

Prairie Swine Centre E-Zine

Volume: 2
Edition: 2

Reinforcing the quality and quantity of the knowledge available at Prairie Swine

This week's edition focuses on reinforcing the quality and quantity of the knowledge available at Prairie Swine Centre. Our next edition will return to a specific technical theme.

We have recently added the technical articles from the Western Hog Journal (2008 to 2011) on the website under the publications tab. These articles, like all of the other Journals and publications on our website represent reliable technical data and compliments the other information available at www.prairieswine.com. Later this summer each of these articles will be summarized and added to our database of over 5,500 scientific articles, and making access much easier through our PorkInsight search process. Career Opportunity

Adding to the development and distribution of knowledge requires passionate, competent people. The Prairie Swine Centre has received funding to rehire a Manager of Information Services. We are looking for someone with industry, communication and/or sales experience that would like to lead this program in developing the type of knowledge services that the pork industry needs. See the job advertisement on our website (<http://www.prairieswine.com/career-opportunity-manager-information-services-technology-transfer/>).

We are refilling our Manager of Contract Research position. This person coordinates our work with independent businesses (example feed, genetics, pharmaceutical, etc) providing research services at Prairie Swine Centre or elsewhere to meet customer needs for product registration, verification of product efficacy and independent assessment trials for marketing.
